

OLIVER HUME REAL ESTATE GROUP

RESEARCH ANALYST – MEDIUM DENSITY AND HIGH RISE

Oliver Hume is at the forefront of Australia's project marketing industry - selling more property than any other private Real Estate Agent.

It is the marketing agent behind more than 48,000 products along the eastern seaboard of Australia, representing Australia's leading public and privately listed companies.

As part of the Medium Density and High Rise division's expansion, we are seeking an enthusiastic and motivated individual for its Melbourne office.

This exciting entry level position would suit a person whom 'lives and breathes' real estate and has a flair for IT and presentation. It offers excellent exposure to all facets of the residential property industry, with the opportunity to develop a hands-on approach to analysis.

With a strong IT and analytical skill-set, the incumbent will gather a solid understanding of the property market at both a macro and micro level. You will be extremely confident with Microsoft Excel, PowerPoint, Project and Word, with an ability to manipulate and present data.

Exposure to mapping software such as MapInfo would also be advantageous.

You will also have strong organisational skills, and be a team player with the ability to work across a number of internal business units.

Career advancement exists for an appropriate tertiary qualification in property or a related discipline as too is an eye for detail and a commitment to accuracy.

Remuneration - a market based salary commensurate with experience.

Applications close on 26th July 2010
